Philipp Speaks To
CROWD AT WATERTOWN

Strong Applause is Given Governor Philipp, Who Spoke at Watertown Last Evening.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Watertown, Wis., Aug. 23.—Governor Emanuel L. Philipp spoke to a large audience here last night which by its applause well showed that the governor is strong in this section of the country.

The governor devoted a large portion of his speech to the taxation question and reiterated the figures showing the reduction in the tax levied in this way he had compelled a lessening of the state tax.

The governor made emphasis on the fact that both his opponents in the gubernatorial race were members of the state board of public affairs during the last administration and that which would have recommended a budget approximately $35,000,000 if it had been allowed to become effective, and that this budget was cut over $9,000,000 by the appropriations as finally adopted.

The governor told again here of the history of the legislative fight over the appropriation and the efforts of his opponents to reduce the appropriation and had succeeded in securing their reduction over the amount asked by the finance committee for $2,000,000.

The governor also talked on the foreign question but said that despite the falsehoods that his enemies were uttering on the stump in regard to the appropriation were figures quoted by themselves.

HOW ENGLAND SAVED
U. S. COTTON PLANTER
FROM DIRE DISASTER

Kept Price Up and Spent Millions to Avert Panic in United States
Last Fall.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
London, Aug. 23.—That the British government decided not to let American cotton to go below 3 1/2 cents a pound to planters; that it prepared to spend 250 million to prevent a possible cotton panic in America and that it sent agents to the United States to buy cotton in unlimited quantities to keep the price normal, and also that these agents are still in the United States are facts given to the United States press today.

The British government, when it decided in 1915 to make cotton contractual realized that it might cause a panic in the United States. Felix Rosa, who directed the British plan to prevent this, told today how he did it.

"We had to declare cotton contraband," said he, "but we wanted to protect the cotton planters. We knew the speculators would make capital out of the order in council and drive cotton prices to ruinous depths.

So the British government decided to go into the market as a buyer. I looked over the market and decided we should be ready to buy five million bales; and we had to have 250 million dollars at our disposal constantly.

"We thought the planter should not get less than 3 1/2 cents, so we sent agents to the United States with unlimited authority to buy. That was in July of 1915. We could not let the cotton price fall below 3 1/2 cents.
August 18th the king signed the order in council declaring cotton contraband."

No panic followed. What we had done was not generally known and the strength of cotton in the open market must have been a mystery to the speculators. In the first week cotton went up a cent. Within a month it was up 3 1/2 cents. So the planter received $65,000,000 more for the crop that year than they would have received in normal times."

Is the British government ready to follow with the same action for the 1916 crop? was asked.

"It looks as if the 1916 crop would be able to sell itself without British aid," said Rosa. "An English spinner, who has been in the cotton business all his life. He added in conclusion that every bale of cotton that has been seized by the British has been paid for and that they have lost nothing except possibly on cotton for which he would have received an exorbitant profit if he had gotten it to the market."

By the British. Every bale seized, he said, has been sold to spinners in England and not a single bale remains in storage.

AND HE DID

CITY'S VALUATION BOOSTED $211,944

ASSESSMENT FIGURES ANNOUNCED SHOWING MATERIAL INCREASE IN CITY'S WEALTH.

ALL LINES INCREASED

Horses and Rigs Listed as Passing—Big Boost in Number of Automobiles is Shown.

Janesville's assessed valuation for the year of 1916 is $15,606,631. This is an increase of $211,944. These are the figures announced in the returns made by City Clerk J. P. Hammarlund to County Clerk Howard W. Lee and County Treasurer F. F. Livemore.

In but few instances are decreases, most cases showing substantial increases throughout. Perhaps the greatest increase is shown in automobiles. In 1915 Janesville people owned 431 cars with a valuation of $1,238,870. This year they have exactly 600 cars with a valuation of $2,800,600.

Land Value Up.

Real estate has increased in value over last year. At that assessment the figures were $11,438,319 while in 1916 it has reached $11,595,375, an increase of $157,056. This includes both farm lands as well as lots within the limits of the corporation and the greater increase is shown in improved lots.

Bank stock holdings are $380,545 this year, an increase of $3,019. Merchants' stock shows an increase of $12,474 while manufacturers' stock has also been boosted over 1915, this increase being $12,220.

More Swine, But Value Less.

Against the increase in the number and value of pleasure cars Old Dribb's value is going to the discard in favor of the fast traveling mode of luxury, the automobile. There are forty-three less horses in the city this year and the value decreased $8,935. It might be interesting to note that Janesville this year is becoming a slight bit more civilized. A sheep listed at a value of twenty dollars in 1915 must have died or been converted into the foundation of the rapidly aviating costs of meat. At least it was not listed by the assessor this year. But then again he number of swine in the city has increased which may or may not eliminate the suggested trend to higher prices. There are eleven more swine kept in the city this year than in 1915. A peculiarity about the valuation, however, is that while during last year there were but twenty-seven swine having a valuation of $410, this year there are thirty-eight swine with a $375 valuation, a falling off of thirty-five dollars against an increase of eleven animals.

Utilities Increase.

Untaxable properties of the water and the gas light companies have increased in valuation over fifty thousand dollars. In 1915 the figures were $721,825 while this year they are $770,936, a difference of $55,111.

Along with the decrease in the number of horses, wagons, carriages and sleighs are also passing. There are fifty-three less wagons and rigs with an assessment of $5,240 less than last year.

Janesville tobacco dealers and growers of the weed in the vicinity of the city will be interested in the statistics regarding the comparison of present conditions with those of last year. In 1915 there were 28,514 cases in local warehouses. Their total value was $451,065. This year there is a decrease of 3,651 cases with a value of $91,960.

POLICE GET BOYS FOR STORE THEFTS

Five Given Turn Behind Bars After Confessing to Long List of Robberies—Go With Reprimand.

Investigation along an altogether different line yesterday afternoon set the police on the trail of a group of fourth ward youngsters who have made a practice lately of taking about everything they could lay hands on. They stole from stores and shops downtown, and from boat-houses on the river bank. The youngest was nine and the oldest eleven. After several hours at the police station in a cell, Chief Champion decided not to take them into court. The short experience as criminals behind the bars brought all five to tears and pleading promises that if permitted to go this time they would never steal again. One of the youths said as he left the station: "If I ever see anything layin' in the street I wouldn't pick it up."

The five admitted taking expensive reels, spoons, hooks and poles and fishing tackle from the boat-houses. One told how he stole a small sized bicycle from a repair shop, taking it out of the alley door as the proprietor waited on a customer in the front of the store. They also visited the basement of stores along Milwaukee street, entering by alley entrances and taking whatever fit their fancy. Another boy was to be called into the station today for talking to the chief for taking a box of shells from a hardware store. He was implicated by one of the five.

Meet on Monday: All members of the Janesville Bowling association are requested to attend a meeting at Miller's alleys on Monday evening, Aug. 28, at eight o'clock, for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year and the transaction of other business. Every one interested in bowling is invited to be present. George F. Kueck, Vice Pres.

BORDER LIFE NOT SO BAD, SOLDIERS DOWN THERE WRITE

Boys in Wisconsin Companies on Mexican Border See Many Interesting Happenings.

Two interesting letters from soldier boys on the Mexican border have been received here at the Janesville Post Office. Both letters tell of interesting happenings in their military life and read as follows:

Brownsville, Texas, August 18, 1916.

Dear Friend: I received your letter sometime ago and this is the first time I have had a chance to answer it. There is not much doing here now as almost everything is settled as far as the border is concerned. The soldiers would do something or take a walk out of here. This is the edge of civilization and the place is dead. The governor of Illinois was down here some time ago and viewed the Illinois militia. They gave him a salute of 13 guns when he arrived.

We had a big parade a few weeks ago and were reviewed by General Parker. There were thirty regiments of infantry in it. There were the 4th and 36th U. S. 1st, 2d and 3rd Iowa, and 1st and 2d Virginia. It was sure some review and some fellow took moving pictures of us. Every time we move or pull off anything you can see some fellow down on a corner turning a crank. The next day they reviewed the cavalry, artillery, engineers, hospital corps, the tanks and all the weapons such as they use for ammunition and other things. We don't do much nowadays, only drill a few hours a day, then we are off for the rest of the day, unless they are on the guard or fatigue. They are liable to hand you a kick and shove any time now, but we are generally good fellows, and if they don't like us, we'll show them.

We have free movies and concerts here in the post, every night so it isn't so bad but I sure crave a change in scenery. There is a hurry-came-go-on now and don't know whether this camp will stand or not. I hope it blows away so maybe then we'll move. This town is dead and the only excitement here is when some of our soldiers get in a fight and shoot each other up. A couple of fellows were shot the other night in a scrap over some Mexican girl or have it. They were shot each other on account of one of the girls I certainly will not interfere. A military police was shooting some one last evening but I don't know whether they got him. They are getting so they search everybody who leaves camp to see if he has a 45 automatic concealed in their clothes and they are going to drive everyone they can't take in for a while.

Write soon and I will answer as best if this hurricane doesn't blow me into Mexico. Your friend, H. Hebel.

San Antonio, Texas, Aug. 20, 1916.

To the Janesville Daily Gazette:

Have been able to set your paper a couple of times since I have been here. I find great pleasure in it. The Gazette, as I worked around Janesville for some time. As yet I have not noticed anything about Co. Madison company which the Madison company when the call came and can truthfully say that I am not sorry that I enlisted as this is an experience that every young man should have.

We just returned from a rifle range called Leon Springs, where we have spent two weeks. Leon Springs is twenty-five miles from here and we had a few days each way to make the hike so we didn't find it very hard. We are pretty well used to hiking by this time. On the trip we found out what real army life was like, as we had to sleep in the open, on the ground in mud tents and between the red ants and chiggers I don't know which are the worst. There are also lots of rattlesnakes and other sorts

TUESDAY'S MARKETS.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—Several hundred hogs sold as high as $11.30 yesterday, being highest price in the history of the yards, which opened late in December of 1905.

Similar high records were established at Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, Peoria and East St. Louis.

Average price of swine yesterday was $10.65, higher than a year ago. Canadian packers were a life of the trade, taking about 1,000 selected "singers" at $11.25@11.30.

Packing droves of hogs yesterday sold at $10.54@11.22, or 14¢ to 22¢ more than Monday. The American mixed cost $10.64 and Western Packing company butchers $11.22.

Notwithstanding prevailing high prices for hogs, some traders are betting they will sell above $12 before the end of next month.

Receipts for today are estimated at 17,000 cattle, 26,000 hogs and 20,000 sheep, against 16,250 cattle, 20,750 hogs and 20,954 sheep yesterday.

Average price of hogs at Chicago was $10.90, against $10.75 Monday, $10.45 Saturday, $10.15 a week ago and $8.50 a year ago.

Montana Cattle at $8.75.

Best native steers here yesterday sold at $10.35, with Montana grassers at $8.75, which were 15c lower than a week ago. The market was little changed from opening this week. Calves closed 25c lower.

Poor to fancy veal calves, 5.00@7.50. Pigs Lower; Hogs Higher.

Another disappointingly small run of hogs forced a further advance of 10¢ to 25¢ in values yesterday. Trade was closed strong. Pigs, however, were sold low and ruled 1¢ lower than the time of the month, while the general average price of hogs is 15¢ above last year, 3¢ low day of the month. Quotations:

Bulk of sales, $10.65@11.20. Heavy butchers and ship, 11.00@11.20. Light butchers, 100 to 230 lbs., 11.00@11.30. Light bacon, 145 to 190 lbs., 10.80@11.30. Growing Girls and Boys

Every physical or mental act that is performed uses up millions upon millions of red corpuscles of the blood. The demand is enormous and continuous. Is it any wonder that the active boy and girl should manifest this need by hunger? Proper food is required so that the system may form new red corpuscles.

HEMO is a concentrated food made with the idea of supplying many of the elements needed in assisting nature to rebuild old blood cells and to manufacture new ones. It is so pleasing to the taste, so easy to assimilate, and so well tolerated by the stomach that a minimum amount of effort by the digestive system is required in converting the food elements into red blood corpuscles.

It is an ideal lunch for the boy or girl, or a pleasing beverage at meal time. Its use will convince you.

Makes a delicious food drink by simply adding water.

There is no doubt that human beings can get along very well on a vegetable diet. Some of the strongest men in the world (the Oriental porters) live almost wholly on rice and the various fruits. VOCATIONAL STUDY IN HIGH SCHOOLS IF BILL GETS O. K.

Senate Passes Measure and It is Now
Up to the House of Rep.
representatives.

SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.
Washington, Aug. 23.—Uncle Sam has put a vocational course of training in every high school in the country by a bill that has just passed the Senate. The bill also passes the House of Representatives. Indications today are that the bill will become a law soon.
The bill was introduced simultaneously in both houses by Senator Smith and Representative Hughes, both of Georgia. It is an amendment of the federal aid system under which the United States government annually contributes nearly $10,000,000 to each state for the maintenance of agricultural colleges and experiment stations, as well as for instruction on the rural extension system.
The bill provides for the maintenance of agricultural colleges and experiment stations, as well as for instruction on the rural extension system.
The proposed law is the result of a steadily growing conviction that the agricultural colleges should be extended to include the study of agricultural engineering, and that the study of agriculture should be compulsory at an early age and be continued to the end of the high school course.
It has been felt that a large percentage of boys destined to make their living from the soil are unable to attend a college, education and need high school credits for college entrance.
Eighteen states now extend aid to their high schools for courses in agricultural, mechanical arts and home economics. The bill annually appropriates $100,000 for this work.
To standardize and rationalize the high school aid work the Smith-Hughes bill provides that the United States shall share in the payment of salaries to state teachers, inspectors and directors in state high schools.
The bill also provides for a Federal Board of Vocational Education.
This board, which would consist of the Commissioner of Education of the United States as Chairman and two members to be appointed, (not more than two from any political party), by the President. This board and state educational authorities shall cooperate in outlining courses, the States Relations service of the Department of Agriculture has pursued a comprehensive system of courses in agriculture. These have been offered to the states for use in the grammar schools, in the rural schools, Mississippi, Wisconsin, Maine and Vermont have installed this course in all their elementary schools since the initiation of the bill a year or so ago.

FOODS THEY BUILD OR DESTROY

Amazing but rarely suspected truths about the things you eat.

By ALFRED W. McCANN (Copyright, 1916, by Alfred W. McCann.)

CHAPTER 101.
The attitude of a number of food adulterators toward many forms of food adulteration, interference with which means a fight with powerful commercial interests, is indicated by the peculiar paradox furnished by the state of New Jersey in its official toleration of the use of sodium sulphate in the preparation of meat products.
Inspired by the disclosures that the butchers of New Jersey were employing the use of sodium sulphate in the preparation of their meat products, I was invited by the health commissioner of New Jersey, Mr. J. J. J.
N. J., the health commissioner of New Jersey, to make a survey of the situation in these cities.
In nearly every shop examined the sulphates were found. It was indeed evident that the entire state was the victim of chemically treated meat and meat products.
Circular 117 of the board of health of the state of New Jersey, issued October, 1911, at Trenton, over the signature of every official of the state board of health, the director of the division of hygiene and chief assistant chief, analyst and assistant analyst of the same division, states
the law on this subject as follows:
"If any food contain any added poisonous or deleterious substance, such ingredient which may render such article injurious to health it shall be deemed to be adulterated, provided that the preparation of food products that are preserved by any external application, applied in such manner that the preserving agent is necessarily removed, mechanically or by directions in water or otherwise, the provisions of this act shall be construed as applying only when when said products are ready for consumption."
Of course, the butchers who employed anhydrous sodium sulphate to preserve their meat products did not label their products showing the housewife how to remove the preservative mechanically or by massage in water, for the simple reason that no housewife in the world is able to remove the preservative in any such manner.
The state board of health, however, went even further than this. It provided that the products of manufacture in the state of New Jersey which preservatives are used, which preservatives are not now specifically prohibited by the department of agriculture of the United States, shall be exempt from the provisions of this act, provided the use of such pre-servatives is stated upon the label or in branding said products.
If the authorities had really been desirous of putting a stop to the anhydrous sodium sulphate abuse these provisions would have enabled them to do so.
When, however, it became evident that the butchers of the entire state were using the drug it also became necessary to appease the wrath of the public by issuing an official statement that would absolve everybody concerned except the legislature.
Such an official statement was issued. It read as follows:
"Board of Health,
State of New Jersey.
The state board of health has done as much as it could with the law under which it is compelled to work. Under the law the food law in this state is defective in many respects and hampers us considerably because of its indefiniteness, and in some instances its weakness. This some satisfaction to the use of such preservatives as anhydrous sodium sulphate and compounds of sulphur acid generally. It also applies to the use of chemical preservatives for chemicals which are used in the chemicals for the purpose of preventing decomposition in foodstuffs. Personally, we are opposed to the use of sodium sulphate or sulphates in foodstuffs, because we believe that there is no necessity for the use of substances of this character in food, and these substances may be injurious to health.
Until the legislature sees fit to laws specifically prohibiting the use of such preservatives it will not be possible for the state board of health to end this abuse.
"WILLIAM G. TICE,
"Chief Chemist."

Russia in Great Awakening; Commercially and Civically

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Stockholm, Sweden, Aug. 23.—Americans, Englishmen, Frenchmen, returning through this neutral gateway from the wide domains of Russia, all tell the same story of the wonderful awakening of the great northern empire commercially and civically as well as in the gathering of military resources to carry the war to a successful conclusion.
Americans in particular seem most deeply impressed with the changes in Russia and are the most sanguine as to the future of that country. They say there is something akin to the old call of the west in the fast-opening opportunities of the wide-reaching resources of Russia which sends an anxious tingle through the veins of every American business man or prospector who has delved into Russian conditions, as they exist today and who is far-sighted enough to see the prosperity that is in store for the Russian people.
"What a Godsend," says one of the Americans, "to the people of an anomalous period in history that barbarous war shall teach a people of 150,000,000 souls the ways and benefits of real civilization and enlightenment. And yet that is what American travelers in Russia all agree is taking place. Many thousands of lives are yet to be sacrificed at the Austro-German fronts, but it is now agreed that there with a million of men trained, disciplined, schooled at least partially in the laws of hygiene and right living, educated in a degree beyond anything contemplated a few years ago, well-fed, well-clothed and ready to take their allotted place in the commercial upbuilding of the empire and the civic conditions of the peasant with only pieces of bark for shoes and a bag for clothing, unkempt, ignorant, untrained in the ways of better living, is brought into the city of training camp, fitted with shoes and warm clothing, out through a "setting up" course and through the first time what his hands, his feet and his brain and body can do. The change wrought in so short a time as fourteen days is said to be marvelous. Regardless of what may be the conditions in Russia that army life has more comforts, more advantages and more educational value than the average Russian peasant ever dreamed of.
The great army comes back from the front its members will not be willing to go back to their old methods of life, but will help in the evolution of a new order of things, help to bring the vast nation of the north to a state of efficiency which will mark it as a dominating world power in deeds perhaps as well as in domain.
It is said that before the war is ended Russia will have had in her army or in training no less than 25,000,000 men—twenty-five million men trained to a degree of at least comparative efficiency, ready to throw their power into industrial energy in field or factory.
But oftentimes the returning travelers are met with the question: "Will not the people, coupled with the manhood of so many millions trained to arms, logically lead to revolution?" The answer invariably is that Russia expects revolution, but it is generally believed it will be the result of a clash at arms. There will be an evolution of tremendous intensity and it remains to be seen whether Russia has the statesman skilled enough to handle this evolution in a manner to prevent it becoming a real revolution.

where—and not a drop to drink," said an American banker on his way back to America.
In the prohibition of vodka most of the people who have visited Russia see the real foundation of the Russian renaissance. But war conditions brought about the ukase which abolished this abuse of alcohol and set the Russian people firmly on their feet. There is no doubt that the centralists will attempt to legalize the sale of vodka once the war is over, but American travelers say such a move will meet with a short shrift.
Prohibition.
It is now claimed that the enormous growth of savings bank deposits since vodka was abolished is one of Russia's greatest safeguards against a widespread revolution for the man with a bank account is neither an anarchist nor a revolutionist. He has a property interest, no matter how small it may be, and such an interest always has been a deterrent of violence.
The returning Russian travelers bring many and varied stories of the resources of the empire. One of the effects is that not less than 8,000,000 men recently have been sent to the front and that another 9,000,000 are in training. All are proud with the absolute assurance that the resources of the Russian men and material must be the deciding factor in the war. There has been told, too, the story of a new explosive shell being manufactured in Russia after a French formula, but not yet used on the western front—a shell which in exploding spreads over a radius of 300 yards a heat of 3,000 degrees, a withering blast calculated to include everything in its fiery reach.
And the travelers all agree that the reports that Russia will not stop fighting until she has gained Constantinople and the Dardanelles as her prize of war. This is the natural outlet of the awakening giant seek and get it. There seems to be a very general understanding here too, that the Allies have made some such agreement with Russia.
Sees Artillery Park.
One American traveler said that in journeying from Petrograd to Moscow the guard came through the train and ordered all curtains closed for a certain period. This was too much for American curiosity, so the traveler turned on the light in his stateroom and peered through the curtains. It was an ammunitions center, he said, and he estimated that in one parking place there were 400 pieces of field artillery, with acres of ammunition awaiting transport to the front.
American business men all say that Russia is ready to welcome American capital and American enterprise even above that of other nations in the present war. German domination in Russia appears to be absolutely at an end. Americans, Englishmen and others are just now beginning to realize what a rich field Russia was for the Germans and what a rich field it will draw opens up to nations friendly with the northern giant. Already some of the largest manufacturers of automobiles, tractors and other farm implements in America have representatives in Russia negotiating for the location, construction and operation of branch plants.
Much and Untilled.
Russia's great natural resources and many of her fertile fields are as yet absolutely untouched. Most of the vast fields are self-sustaining and self-sustaining. The United States and with a territory vastly greater. But it was an Englishman who said:
"It is not to suppose that a single touch of pickaxe will make all Russia blossom like the rose. The fertility of the soil and the natural resources are there with almost limitless abundance, but they require skilled toil to bring them forth."
In the meantime there is much speculation here as to what will be the position of the awakened giant of the north in European politics after ten or twenty years' realization of this vast new strength and limitless resources? The consensus of opinion is that this question will never heavily over the conference table when the statesmen of the warring nations finally meet to arrange a strange new peace and at least a "modified" map of the old world.

NEWS NOTES—MOVIELAND

Sessue Hayakawa was born on the 10th of June, 1889, in Tokio, Japan. He went to school in Japan for a number of years and then took to the stage, where he worked in plays written by himself, as well as other productions. Some time ago he came to this country and traveled rather extensively. For one year he went to school at the University of Chicago. About two years ago Mr. Hayakawa decided that the screen was his field, and he applied to a New York picture company for a position. His application was promptly accepted and since then he has been one of the most popular foreign characters on the screen, playing with the Lasky and New York Motion Picture companies exclusively. If you saw him in "The Blind" you will remember his excellent work in that production. Mr. Hayakawa at the present time lives in Los Angeles in a regular bungalow. He owns an English bull pup named Shoki, which means "destruction," and is the name of a Japanese god. In appearance Mr. Hayakawa is five feet ten inches tall, has black hair and dark brown eyes, and weighs 155 pounds. His hobbies are fencing, jiu jitsu, swimming and painting. He is married to Tsuru Aoki. In Mr. Hayakawa, be it further said, belongs the distinction of having introduced Japanese roles in America.
Edward Earle in Dana Picture
Edward Earle, who won a large following by his splendid acting and engaging personality in pictures, will be seen opposite Viola Dana in her next picture, as yet unnamed.
In this new picture Mr. Earle plays the part of a young man who for years suffered from a condition of blindness, though he ultimately regains his sight. To add realism to his portrayal he has learned the Braille system, by which the blind read.
Mr. Earle was last seen on the program with Viola Dana in "The Innocence of Ruth." He will also be especially remembered for his splendid portrayal of Ransom in Richard Harding Davis' "The Road to Rome."
Lucille Young, in playing opposite Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree in features, will wear one of the most lavish wardrobes presented to date on the screen. Several modistes and several weeks have been engaged in the making of this wardrobe, which promises to be of originality and exceptional taste.

YES, INDEED!
"Is when the coal man's bill you pay, However you deplore it,
"Is strange he gives his coal a weight, And yet he charges for it."

The returned explorer, sitting at the club window behind Fernan highball, frowned as Timothy Wiggs approached him timidly. Already that clown, seven other strangers had introduced themselves and tried to worm a free lecture out of the eminent traveler.
"I've seen your picture in the papers and everything," began Timothy Wiggs bashfully.
"Ah," said the renowned discoverer briefly.
"You must have picked up many strange bits of information about the habits and customs of the birds in the various countries you have visited," went on Wiggs. "I am particularly interested in birds, having two canaries at home, and a talking beehive of my own, and—"
"Quite natural," observed the explorer. "You will be interested in a peculiar case that came to my notice in Sustaining Central Africa."
"Yes," encouraged Wiggs, his eyes shining.
"A commercial traveler," explained the explorer, "an agent for a rubber stamp concern, dropped his case of samples in an ostrich stock yard, and before he could pick it up the ostriches had eaten all the rubber stamps. Ever since that time the ostrich eggs from that yard, when sold, are already numbered and dated."
With a sickly, undecided smile, Timothy Wiggs withdrew to read Skowder's magazine over a fellow member's shoulder.

AT THE BEVERLY TONIGHT.
Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance." Billie Burke, as Gloria, is proposed to in this chapter of "Gloria's Romance" for Treason. Following the sleigh ride with the girl of his dreams, Billie musters up courage to ask her point blank to become his wife. And you who have already seen how charmingly pretty Billie can be in this or that situation, can perhaps imagine how fascinating she can appear when being proposed to. Those cunning little maneuvers, that have won her fame and fortune on the speaking stage, are given full play in the proposed scene, and so cleverly does she enact her role that thousands of new admirers are certain to flock to her banner as a result of her playing in "The Gathering Storm," which is the title of the fifth chapter of "Gloria's Romance," at the Beverly tonight.
In addition John Frusher, following an order issued by Judge Edgar Whipple will be seen in "The Reapers."
AT THE BEVERLY, THURSDAY.
Anita Stewart in "The Daring of Diana." The most popular star of Almond is seen as the newspaper reporter in "The Daring of Diana," to be shown at the Beverly theatre on Thursday.
Anita Stewart has won the title through the masterful interpretations which she has given the motion picture public ever since her debut several years ago.
In this feature film, Miss Stewart is cast to splendid advantage—the role of a newspaper reporter is portrayed before. Instead of a brusque, officious and aggressive character with a huge notebook and pencil, this artist who works under the Vitagraph eagle, has made the part a real one.

MAID OF MEXICO CLOSING SHOW

The Milton Schuster Stock Company Present Last Show of Their Engagement at Myers Theater.
Closing a three-day engagement here at the New Myers theater, the Milton Schuster stock company put on a little vaudeville skit entitled "Maid of Mexico." If life on the Mexican border was only as full of joy and song as the merry company depicted it last night we would see a great exodus of men toward the old Rio Grande.
For a musical show with plenty of snappy comedy, the company have provided a good amusement, and the only regret the management has is that the evenings have been too warm for any real good audiences.
Optimistic Thought.
Treason has no place where obedience holds primacy.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

By MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON
Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am in love with a young man and I know that he cares a lot for me. But one thing puzzles me. When I call him up he seems to be busy. Of course, he is in business and he is after the money, but I don't know how to know he is not working hard. I thought that if he cared very much for me he would see me when I wanted him to and be willing to talk to me over the telephone. Some times he tells me that he will call me up if he has time, and then he does not call me. I have to call him. When I ask him he did not call he says he was very busy. One time I said that I knew he did not care for me and he said he did not. I am a very good business and it took most of his time to should still go to him when he can go with me, or should I drop him? I was sure he loved me, I would put up with the way he treats me, but I am not sure. What do you think?

BRIDGES.
The wee small voice that tells you whether or not a man cares for you usually right. Since you doubt the man's love, please does not care for you. Don't telephone him under any circumstances, and don't let him come to see you. A man likes to be left alone in his own way and doesn't like to be bothered with a girl phoning him or asking him to come over. Perhaps if you give him a chance to seek you and do not seeking yourself he will learn to care for you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: My trouble is "too much mother-in-law." I have been married two blocks from us, but my mother-in-law comes to see us even when I am sick. When I go there she tells me about the styles and everything that is no concern of hers. I do try to dress in style, but not extravagantly. When my husband is with us she talks and is very friendly with the baby, but when we are alone she never pays any attention to the baby and has hardly a thing to say to me.

I have been letting things go to avoid trouble, but I am decidedly tired of running after her all the time. If I don't go there she complains to my husband and he coaxes me to go back. Anything but the way she acts. I know positively that she deceives him and his father.
Should I remain away from home and make trouble, or should I go with my husband? I have tried several times to make trouble between my husband and me, but she has not succeeded so far. He goes there every day or two. I would rather stay away altogether and pay no attention to her.

A PUZZLED WIFE.
Be thankful that your mother-in-law does not live with you. Don't do anything to make your husband unhappy, and a break with his mother would have that result. You can stand her unpleasant ways for his sake. If you love him, go to her home when he is alone and pay no attention to the unkind things she says to you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am eighteen years old and I am in love with a bachelor about thirty-five years old. He has known our family for several years, but it is only lately that he has taken me anywhere. Do you think it is all right for me to go out with him?
(2) He has asked to kiss me good night. Should I let him?
(3) Do you think there is too much difference in our ages for us to be happy if we get married?

DIMPLES.
(1) I do not think you should go out with a bachelor or some older person goes along.
(2) Don't let him kiss you. It seems to me that he shows a lack of respect to ask you to do so. Bachelors are a lot of things, but they are not to be trusted.
(3) I do think there is too much difference in your ages.

SIDE TALKS

RUTH CAMERON

IT MADE HER MISERABLE.

We were talking about dogs the other day. One woman said, "I can't have a long-haired dog in my house. They get things so unclean." "Short-haired dogs are all right in warm weather," said another. "But last winter I was visiting my sister and you know how cold it was there? Well, she had a short-haired dog and it really made me miserable. It looked so cold. I told her I didn't have one around."

The lady's sensitive interest in the matter is typical of certain breeds. I mean that attitude which comes from beholding or hearing of suffering of any kind because it interferes with their peace of mind. When Ignorance is Bliss.
A book about certain industrial diseases and the misery resulting from them lay on our library table the other day. "Have you read that?" we asked the visiting lady.
She picked it up and gave it one glance. "Mercy, no," she said, dropping it at the first few pages. "I looked at the first few pages, and I was all about those depressing things and I simply couldn't go any further. I hate things like that. How can you read those Poor Creatures Have to Live?"

There is something in what you say, my friend. It is a highly sensible point of view. Doubtless that is just what the Pharisee thought who carefully passed by on the other side. He didn't want to see suffering.

The sight of suffering makes the heart painfully tender, and the sympathy uncomfortably acute. It makes one less snugly content with one's own ease and prosperity. It gives one an uneasy sense that one ought to be doing something to relieve the suffering of those who are less fortunate.

And the Pharisee was wise enough to avoid all that discomfort. And yet some of us, I think, are just what the Pharisee of whom Christ said, "Go thou, and do likewise."

are called toxins, and are similar to the poisons produced in the body of a patient who has diphtheria or typhoid or other familiar infections. Others are called ptomaines, and not all ptomaines are poisonous to man. In fact, only a few of the ptomaines or decomposition products produced by bacterial changes in protein foods are poisonous to man. Such ptomaines as are poisonous to man produce effects very similar to the effects produced by poisoning with such alkaloids as strychnine, curarine and other well known drugs.

The popular notion that canned foods are more likely to produce ptomaine poisoning than fresh foods is founded on fact, but it is not true that canned foods are in themselves dangerous, but that less care is exercised in keeping canned foods refrigerated or protected from contamination after the can is opened and exposed to the air.

No amount of cooking can render food that has undergone slight pure active change harmless. It has been shown that even twelve hours' boiling failed to destroy ptomaine poison in meat. The original germs may be destroyed, yet their poisons remain.

The presence of ptomaines in food is not necessarily evident in taste, odor or appearance. The severe epidemics of genuine ptomaine poisoning have been caused by the eating of meat apparently not undergoing decomposition.

Milk, cheese and ice cream are capable of causing ptomaine poisoning when contaminated.

The symptoms of ptomaine poisoning develop within a few minutes or an hour or two after the contaminated food is eaten. Severe irritation to the gastro-intestinal system—vomiting, pain, diarrhoea—is one symptom. There may or may not be high fever. Embarrassment of breathing, fainting or collapse resembling that of shock is another common symptom. A very rapid, weak pulse is another symptom. Drowsiness, headache, dizziness, delirium, convulsions or paralysis may develop. The nature of the symptoms depends upon the type of ptomaine or toxin in the food. The treatment must be determined by the type of poisoning. Just as the antidote for ordinary poisoning is decided upon.

The prevention of ptomaine poisoning is summed up in three words. Cleanliness, refrigeration and the limitation of the diet to strictly fresh foods in the summer time, especially avoiding animal proteins and substituting vegetable proteins, will insure the household or camp against this danger.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
Now, Fat Women, Here's a Remedy.
Question—Have been following the course of exercises published some time ago for reducing, and am getting quite supple. Can you recommend anything especially to reduce the bust? I have been deceived by so many alleged "fat reducers" that I appreciate the soundness of your advice.

Answer—Now that you have learned that exercise is harmless and even helpful to a stout woman, here are the best remedies in the world for reducing (or enlarging) the bust: Kneading bread, swimming, trapeze work, climbing trees, playing tennis, scrubbing clothes, deep breathing exercises, lifting the rigid body on the outstretched arms as high as possible from the floor, and walking with the crown (not the top) of the head as high as you can hold it, and the chin pulled in double-chin fashion.

Household Hints

HOME-MADE CALSOMINE
Home-made calsamine or fresco paint is easy to make. Use whitening, tint it with dye the color wanted, stir up to a good thick cream, then add to it a heavy dose of turpentine. This will not run off.

Yellow ochre and no whitening used makes a cream ceiling. Use flour paste for a body. One good coat is sufficient. It makes a putty, easy to mix. It makes a putty, easy to mix, and the cost is not much.
By using dye and mixing colors you can have any color you want. Wash the brush in water, then in alcohol, or dye as you want it, and dye and whitening makes pink or red as deep as you use color, it depends on the mixture.
Make a good paint for a room. It does not cost much and is better than dirty walls.

CHOCOLATE MARSHMALLOW

Prepare the filling before cake part is made; two egg whites beaten to a froth, two cups sugar with two-thirds cup water, boil sugar and water together until it has a grainy texture, and one-half dozen marshmallows, and as they melt and it is cooling, add the stiff whites and beat until thick. Make roll as follows: Three eggs creamed with one cup sugar; add half cup warm water, flavor with vanilla, then add two squares baker's unsweetened soda, and one teaspoon cream of tartar, two teaspoons melted lard and one and one-fourth cups flour. Beat up good and smooth, pour into four-greased, pat with spoon until even, roll over the pan, then bake. When cake is done, turn out of pan into a mold, roll in the dry goods store and strip off the cloth. Prepare a good roll cloth with care and lay by to cool before cutting into it.

SIMPLE WRITING TABLE

To make a combination portable writing desk and lap board procure two boards twenty-four inches long upon which gluing has been wrapped in the dry goods store and strip them together. This cannot be a good light sewing board of handy size and weight.
Then make a cover of cretonne to fit the board open on one end. Down one end on the top side put two rockers (7x5 inches) for stationery, the top one being used for envelopes and lined for pen.
The remainder of the space is used for blotter (20x14 1/2 inches), which is slipped into three-cornered pockets. A handle at the top makes it convenient to hang or carry when slipped over the board and rolled up. It is very useful to take to the cool place on the porch and the entire cost is little.

THE TABLE

Corn Omelet—Grate corn from four ears of boiled corn. Beat four eggs well, add three tablespoons cream and cook in hot pan. When ready to fold, sprinkle with salt and pepper, add the corn and turn out on a hot dish. Heat the corn slightly over hot water before putting into omelet.

Stuffed Eggs for the Picnic—Cut in two hard-boiled eggs, remove the yolks, chop and mix with them chopped cold chicken, lamb or veal (some add minced onion or parsley), season, and add gravy or a thickened milk sauce. Fill in the cavity with an egg, form, fill in the cavity level, put the two halves together, roll in beaten egg. Put in wire basket and dip in boiling lard until slightly browned. Serve cold.

New Cabbage Salad—Two quarts finely chopped cabbage, two level tablespoons salt, two of white sugar, one of black pepper and a heaping one of ground mustard. Rub yolks of four hard-boiled eggs until smooth, add half cup butter (slightly warmed), mix thoroughly with the cabbage and add teaspoon of good vinegar. Serve with whites of the eggs sliced and placed on the salad.

REMOVES STAINS.
A few drops of ammonia, put into the water that is used for dampening the sponge, when applying cleaner to white shoes, leaves the shoes beautifully clean and takes out any kind of a stain.

GINGLES' JINGLES

'TIS A QUEER OLD WORLD.

'Tis a queer old world, but then we seem to like it. For it seems we're always glad to stick around, we don't care to cast our lot with the ones that now are not, longings such as that are not considered sound. We would rather brave the storms and take the hardships, keep a sticking on the job right here below, than to take a chance above, even though 'tis based on love, we would never feel quite satisfied to go. Though at times we do complain and lose our temper, there are times that things don't seem to jibe just right, but if patiently we wait, soon again we'll strike our gate—soon the daytime will eliminate the night. The unpleasant thoughts again be ancient history, smooth and calm again will run the troubled sea, and the world look clear and bright, when we flood our souls with light. 'Tis a queer old world, but good enough for me. Edna H. Gingles

Training a Husband

Wherein Morris, is Irritable Again and Marian Weary.

"Marian, can't you stop that bird from screaming enough to take the top of one's head off?" called the irritated voice of Morris Southy from the top of the stairs.

"I suppose I could stop him up," wearily replied Marian.
"Well, I wish you would. It is a pity that on the few days when I can get time to take a nap I must be disturbed by that noisy bird."
"I am sorry he disturbs you," would have covered him up if I had known you were trying to keep him covered up more than I have to," Marian spread a cloth over the cage.

"I wish his neck was wrung. What is the use of keeping a thing that is a source of annoyance to everybody all the time?"

"Oh Roger thinks so much of him. It would break his heart to have to give it up," Marian's voice took on the tender quality it always had when speaking of her children.
"I guess he would get over it," snapped Roger's father. "It is nonsense to allow a child's pet to make the whole family uncomfortable."
"You are the only one," inconvenienced. I never get a chance to take a nap in the day time and the children all enjoy his singing. You will let them have a dog and they must have something to pet. It is a child's right." Touch Marian on the subject of her children and she would show fight every time.

"Children's rights!" snorted the irate father. "I guess it is the right of a tired man to sleep without having a hole drilled in his ear with shrieking bird. I'll wring his neck if he wakes me up again." Marian heard the retreating step of her husband and she went back to her kitchen where she was canning peaches, with despair in her heart. Morris was getting more irritable and nervous every day. She had hoped that having a big house and a yard for the children to play in would cause less friction than when they were crowded together in a tiny flat, but things were no better.

"What can I do? What can I ever do," she thought desperately. "If it was only myself I could get along somehow, but it is awful for children to be brought up in an atmosphere of constant fretfulness."
"When I think of my old home with its rollicking brood, my heart aches for mine, hampered, repressed as they are. That was the way to live. We all grew up without knowing there was such a thing as a nerve in the body. Sometimes when the brood was particularly uproarious our mother would look up and say: "Don't you think the children are getting a little noisy father?" and he would look up from his paper and say, "I guess they are not hurting anything; let them have a good time. I want them to have a happy childhood. A noise does not disturb me as long as it is a pleasant noise."

A smile crossed her face as she remembered it all.

"We certainly did have a happy childhood," she reflected, "and it is every child's right. Mine are being defrauded of their inheritance, while I, their mother, sit silent and do not defend their rights."

Marian had filled the last jar with the yellow peaches and they stood in a row on the back of the table. She washed up the canning dishes and put them away, then sank down on a chair with her head in her hands. She was very tired. The heat was a factor that added to her weariness. Only a few days of high temperature at a time had ever to be endured in the eastern city from which they had come.

"I suppose it is the heat that adds to Morris' irritability," she pressed her fingers against her throbbing temples. "It is hard to bear. Perhaps when it gets cooler he will be less nervous. I must be patient, I suppose."

rector of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church here, from Henrietta L. Ackley, a belle of Atlanta and Washington when he married her in 1907, became effective in the New York State Supreme court here today.

No one knew there was any trouble between the prominent couple until the case came up and the interlocutory decree granted in Supreme court May 25th.

According to the testimony of witnesses for Dr. Ackley, none of which was contested or even replied to by Mrs. Ackley, she had been guilty of the impropriety of traveling through Italy and other parts of Europe for her health with one "Sam Charles."

Any time after today the Rev. Mr. Ackley may remarry, but his former wife is forbidden to remarry in less than five years.

Nobody seems to know exactly who Sam Charles is. Mrs. Ackley is a niece of the widow of General John B. Gordon, once United States Senator and governor of Georgia. She was an intimate friend of Miss Theodora Shonts and her sister, the Duchess de Chauvines.

"John," the ironmaster smiled patently as his friend came and knelt beside him. "You got here quickly."

"Are you badly hurt, Jarvis?"

"The thing is in here somewhere," Hammon took his hand away from his breast, and Merkle saw that the fingers were bloody. "Can you get me out of here quietly?"

John Merkle rose to his full height, his lips writhed back from his teeth. Harshly he inquired: "Where is that woman?"

"She's back yonder in her room," Bob told him. "She's ill."

Merkle turned, but, reading his intent, Hammon checked him, crying in a strong voice: "None of that, John. I did it myself. It was an accident."

"I don't believe it."

Hammon's eyes met those of his accuser; the two stared at each other steadily for a moment.

The other occupants of the room had listened breathlessly; now Lorelei stirred and Merkle read more than mere bewilderment in her face. He opened his lips, but the wounded man did not wait for him to speak.

"You must believe me," he said, earnestly. "It's the truth, and I won't have Lila involved—we've been a great deal to each other. Tonight—I accused her wrongfully. It was all my fault—I'm to blame for everything."

There was a pause. "Now get me out of here as quietly and quickly as you can. I'm really not hurt much. Come, come! There's nobody home except Orson and some of the kitchen help, and Orson is all right—the women are gone, you know. He'll get a doctor. It's a—bad business, of course, but I've thought it all out, and you must do exactly as I say."

The effort of this long speech told on the sufferer.

Sweat beaded his face; nevertheless, his jaws remained firmly set; his glance was purposeful, his big hands were gripped tightly over the arms of the chair. There was something superb, something terrible about his unchanging grimace.

"Is your car outside, John?" he asked.

Merkle shook his head. He was thinking swiftly. "I wouldn't dare risk that, anyhow. The driver is a new man."

"Get a cab," Jim offered, in a panic. "The cab driver would be sure to—"

"I'll drive," Bob volunteered. "I'm drunk, but I've done it before when I was drunker. It's an old trick of mine—sort of a joke, see? Give me some money—a cabby'll do anything for money at this time of night."

Merkle eyed the speaker in momentary doubt, then banded him a roll of bank-notes. "It's a serious business, Bob, but Jarvis can't stay here. There's somebody else to consider besides us and—Miss Lynn. I'm thinking about Mrs. Hammon and the girls." He followed Bob to the door and let him out, stepped swiftly down the hall, then, without knocking, opened the door to Lila's Lynn's bedroom and entered.

Lila was busy at her dressing. At his entrance she uttered a frightened cry and a silver spoon slipped from her nerveless fingers. Merkle saw a little open box, a glass of water, the cap of a pearl-and-gold fountain pen, but took scant notice of them, being too deeply stirred and too much surprised at her appearance. She was no longer the vital, dashing girl he had known, but a pallid, cringing wreck of a woman. She shrank back at sight of him, babbling unintelligible words and covering as if expecting a blow.

"Did you shoot him?" he asked, grimly.

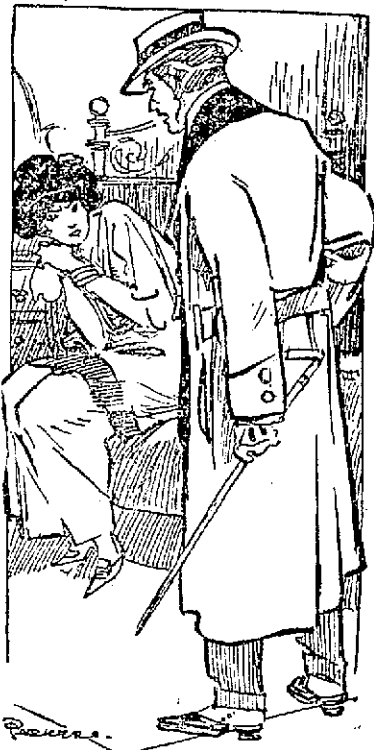

Shivering, choking, speechless, Lila stared at him. A repetition of his question brought no reply.

Seizing her roughly, he shook her, muttering savagely:

"If I were sure, by God, I'd strangle you!"

She remained limp; her expressionless stare did not change.

Merkle heard a stir behind him and found Jimmy Knight's blanched face peering in at him. Even fright could not entirely rob the younger man's features of their sly indolence.

"Did You Shoot Him?" He Asked Grimly.

"Mr. Hammon's calling you," said Jim, then blinked at the wretchedly disheveled woman.

"Here!" Merkle beckoned him with a jerk of his head. This girl must get away from here. She'll ruin everything in her condition. Try to put her in some kind of shape while Lorelei packs her bag. We had better get her out of the country if we can."

Jim's quick eyes took in the articles on the dressing table. "Hut! Dope," he exclaimed. "She's a coker—she's killed herself up. But, say—you don't really think she—did it, do you?"

"I don't know what to think. It's just as bad, either way. Hammon's wife and daughters must never know. Now, quick. See what you can do with her."

Merkle returned to the library, sent Lorelei in to her brother's assistance, then scanned his friend's face anxiously. But Hammon had not moved; the sweat still stood upon his lips and forehead, his jaws were still set like stone.

Several months before, Bob Wharton, during one of his hilarious moments, had conceived the brilliant notion of hiring a four-wheeler and driving a convivial party of friends from place to place. The success of his exploit had been so gratifying that he had repeated the performance, but he was in a far different mood now as he left the Elegancia. The shock of Lorelei's announcement, the sight of his stricken friend, had sobered him considerably, yet he was not himself by any means. At one moment he saw and reasoned clearly, at the next his intoxication benumbed his senses and distorted his mental vision. For once in his life he wished himself sober.

Broadway, that pulsating artery of New York life, was still flowing a thin stream of traffic despite the lateness of the hour, and Bob's mind had become clearer by the time he reached it. Several taxicabs whirled past, both north and south bound, but he knew better than to hire them, so he waited as patiently as he could while those billows of intoxication continued to ebb and flow through his brain, robbing him of that careful judgment which he fought to retain.

At last the clod-clop-clop of a horse's hoofs sounded close by, and an unshaven man in an ancient high hat steered a four-wheeler to the curb, barking, "Keb, keb!"

Bob lurched forward and laid a hand upon the driver's knee. "Very man I'm lookin' for." The hiccup that followed was by no means intentional.

"Yes, sir. Where to, sir?"

But Bob shook his head vigorously and waved a comprehensive gesture toward the west. "Got a party of my own back yonder—everybody sosed but me—understand? I'm the only sober one, so I'm goin' to drive 'em home, see? How much?"

"How much for what?" demanded the cabman.

"For the cab—one hour. I'll bring it back."

Nothing except Bob's personal appearance prevented the driver from whipping up without more ado. The night was old—and these jokers sometimes pay well, the man reflected.

"How'd I know you'd bring it back?" he inquired.

"Matter of honor with me. I'll be back in no time. Will ten dollars be right? I'll make it fifteen, and you can lend me your coat and hat. We'll exchange—have to, or no joke. Is it a go?"

The offer was tempting, but the driver calmly demanded Wharton's name and address before committing himself. The card that Bob handed him put an end to the parley; he wheeled into the side street and removed his long, nickel-buttoned coat and his battered tie, taking Bob's broadcloth and well-blocked hat in return.

"First one o' these I ever had on," he chuckled. "If you ain't back I'll take these glad rags to Charley Voice's hotel, eh?"

"Tight! The Charlevoix. But I'll be back." Bob drove away with a parting flourish of his whip.

The elevator was in its place, the hall-man dozing, when Wharton entered the Elegancia and rang the bell of Lila's Lynn's apartment. Once he had gained admittance little time was wasted. He and Merkle helped Hammon to his feet, then each took an arm; but the exertion told, and Jarvis hung between them like a drunken man, a gray look of death upon his face.

"Watch out for the door-man," Jimmy Knight cautioned for the twentieth time. "Make him think you've got a souse."

"Aren't you coming along?" asked Bob.

But Jim recoiled. "Me? No. I'll stay and help Lila make her getaway."

Merkle nodded agreement. "Don't let her get out of your sight, either, understand? There's a ship sailing in the morning. See that she's aboard."

Jarvis Hammon spoke. "I want you all to know that I'm entirely to blame and that I did this myself. Lila is a—good girl." The words came laboriously, but his heavy brows were drawn down, his jaw was square. "I was clumsy. I might have killed her. But she's all right, and I'll be all right, too, when I get a doctor. Now put that pistol in my pocket, John. Do as I say. There! Now I'm ready."

Bob Wharton mounted the box and drove to Central Park West. At Sixty-seventh street he wheeled into the sunken causeway that links the East and West sides.

Once in the shadows, Merkle leaned from the door, crying softly, "Faster! Faster!"

Bob whipped up, the horse cantered, the cab reeled and bounced over the cobblestones, rocking the wounded man pitifully.

To John Merkle the ride was terrible, with a drunkard at the reins and in his arms a perhaps fatally injured man, who, despite the tortures of that bumping carriage, interspersed his groans with cries of "Hurry, hurry!"

When he felt the grateful smoothness of Fifth avenue beneath the wheels he leaned forth a second time and warned Bob, "Be careful of the watchman in the block."

The liquor in Bob was dying; he bent downward to inquire, "In he all right?"

Merkle nodded, then withdrew his head.

The Hammon residence has changed owners of late, but many people recall its tragic associations and continue to point it out with interest. It is a massive pile of gray stone, standing just east of Fifth avenue, and its bronze doors open upon an exclusive, well-kept side street. At the farther corner, dimly discernible beneath the radiance of a street light, Bob made out the watchman, now at the end of his patrol. The moment was propitious; there could be no further delay.

Bob reined in and leaped from his box. Merkle had the cab door open and was hoisting Hammon from his seat.

"Have you got the key?" Bob asked, swiftly.

"Yes. Help me! He's fainted, I think."

They lifted the half-conscious man out, then with him between them struggled up the steps; but Hammon's feet dragged; he hung very heavy in their arms.

Merkle was not a strong man; he was panting, and his hands shook as he fumbled with the lock. The key escaped him and tinkled upon the stone.

"Hurry! Here comes the watchman!" Bob was gazing over his shoulder at the slowly approaching figure.

A second but briefer delay, and they stood in the gloom of the marble foyer hall. Then they shuffled across the door to the great, curving stairway.

Hammon had assured them that there would be no one in the house except Orson, his man, and some of the kitchen servants, the others having followed their mistress to the country; nevertheless the rescuers' nerves were painfully taut, and they tried to go as silently as burglars; when they finally gained the library, they were drenched with perspiration. Merkle switched on the lights; they deposited the wounded man on a couch and bent over him.

Hammon was not dead. Merkle felt his way into the darkened regions at the rear and returned with a glass of spirits. Under his and Bob's ministrations the unconscious man opened his eyes.

"You got me here, didn't you?" he whispered, as he took in his surroundings. "Now go—everything is all right."

"We're not going to leave you," Merkle said, positively.

"No!" echoed Bob. "I'll wake up Orson while John telephones the doctor."

But Hammon forbade Bob's movement with a frown. It was plain that despite his weakness his mind remained clear.

"Listen to me," he ordered. "Prop me up—put me in that chair. I'm choking." They did as he directed. "That's better. Now, you mustn't be seen here—either of you. We can't explain." He checked Merkle. "I know best. Go home; it's only two blocks—I'll telephone."

"You'll ring for Orson quick?" Hammon nodded.

"Rotten way to leave a man," Bob mumbled. "I'd rather stick it out and face the music."

"Go, go! You're wasting time," Hammon's brow was wrinkled with pain and anger. "You've been good; now hurry."

Merkle's thin face was marked with deep feeling. "Yes," he agreed. "There's nothing else for us to do; but let Orson to phone me quick. I'll be back here in five minutes." Then he and Bob stole out of the house as quietly as they had stolen in.

Everyday Wisdom By DON HEROLD

ELECTRIC FANS

An electric fan could eat up its cage and jump off the mantel and cut a man's arm off if it wanted to. But it does not want to. Perhaps it does not even know it could. It could run around and chew up the window curtains and scratch all the plastering off the wall and go out into the street and scare old ladies and terribly pedestrians and frighten little children into hysterics, and slash up automobile tires and hack up the front lawn and hurt a lot of policemen when they came to arrest it, but somehow it never thinks of such things. It just sits on the mantel and purrs, and the worse thing it does is to give out a stiff neck now and then when anyone is impolite enough to turn his back.

This just shows how man controls the elements. Fire, water, wild animals, horses, and electric fans are his servants. Man has gone down to the middle of the earth and dug up steel, and beat it out into thin sheets and sharpened it like a razor and put it into a cage and charged it with the west wind and made the electric fan, and told it to sit on the mantel and turn over and over real fast and cool up the room.

How cheerful is an electric fan in the home, buzzing happily, with the family sitting around on a hot summer evening, counting the revolutions of the wheel and listening to father's wonderful tales of the pioneer days when palm-leaf fans were run by hand, a process in which there was little profit, for the fact that the exertion involved aroused much more heat than the fan could begin to dispel. And at this the children laugh and clap their hands in glee and go over and stick their fingers in the wonderful new electric fan—were it not for mother's grabbing them by the neck and saying, "You are too hot, you are too hot, just in the nick of time and explaining that the electric fan is too vicious and bloody if you cross it.

PINKNEY'S PLACE IN HISTORY

His Fame as the Greatest Lawyer the United States Has Produced Is Secure.

Even that tritest of truisms, the ephemerality of a lawyer's fame, offers no adequate explanation of the obscurity in which sleeps the genius of William Pinkney. For Pinkney was not merely a great lawyer. According to testimony that leaves no room for doubt or controversy, he was the very greatest lawyer that this country has ever produced.

Nor was this all. He served his country with distinction and success in the labyrinth of diplomacy, at the cabinet table, in the halls of congress and even on the field of battle. Above all, at a most critical point of our history, when the clamor of contending sections disturbed the tranquility of the Sage of Monticello, "like a fire bell ringing in the night," to use Jefferson's own expressive phrase, it was Pinkney who rose to the occasion and recalled senators to a sense of their duty and patriotism.

Of him John Marshall said that he was the greatest man he had ever seen in a court of justice. Of him Taney wrote in 1854: "I have heard almost all the great advocates of the United States, both of the past and present generation, but I have seen none equal to him." Of him Story remarked: "His clear and forcible manner of putting his cases before the court, his powerful and commanding eloquence, occasionally illumined with sparkling lights, but always logical and appropriate and, above all, his accurate and discriminating law knowledge, which he pours out with wonderful precision, give him, in my opinion, a great superiority over every man whom I have known."

When such a court unanimously concurs in rendering judgment, bold indeed the man who claims an appeal—H. H. Hagan in Case and Comment.

SIMPLE WAY TO TEST CREAM

French Scientist Has Given to the World a Discovery That Is of Distinct Value.

Professor Lindet of the French Agronomic Institute has given to the Academy of Agriculture a very simple process for ascertaining rapidly the quantity of fatty matter in cream. It is the fatty matter that gives cream its quality, the more of this butter the better the cream. This is the process: A drop of cream is placed upon a sheet of paper and introduced at once into an oven heated to 105 degrees centigrade. The watery part of the cream evaporates and the fat, absorbed by the paper, forms a spot which enlarges rapidly at first, then more slowly as the edges of the spot increase their distance from the point at which the drop has been placed. At the end of a specified time the area of the spot is measured and compared with that of a spot formed by a drop of pure grease of the same size deposited at the same time and under identical conditions.

Professor Lindet uses drops of 1-100 of a cubic centimeter in size, and places his paper in wooden frames to prevent it from curling up in the oven. He removes it before the spots have spread to more than three or four centimeters in diameter.

Corpus Christi Day.

Corpus Christi kept today by all Roman and Anglican Catholics, is connected with two towns prominent in the present war. It arose from the dream of a religious lady at Leire, and was formally sanctioned in 1264 by a bishop of Verdun who became Pope. It came to England about 1320, and was soon made a popular fete. In Wales on this anniversary the doorways of houses were decked with flowers, the maidenhair fern being chiefly selected for the purpose. Previous to the recent Anglican revival Corpus Christi day was kept at the Oxford college. It has been observed for five centuries in the city of London by the Worshipful company of Skinners, who attend in 'state their special service at St. Mary Aldermary. But the "Skinners" who walk in the procession now carry posies of flowers instead of the "war torches" mentioned by Stow.—London Chronicle.

Chapel in the Trenches.

In one of the French trenches the men have constructed a small chapel underneath the earth. It is sufficiently large to admit 20 men at the same time. Every effort has been made by the clever workmen who have built it, skilled miners from the district of La Loire, to make the underground chapel difficult of bombardment. The interior ornamentation has been carried to high perfection, for a parquet floor, carpets, candlesticks, kneeling chairs saved from the ruined churches are to be found in it. A wooden altar has been erected in the trench chapel, and a magnificent French flag, the gift of an officer, has been hung in it.

Mouth-Filling Wor.

That the European battle fronts and the Mexican frontier have nothing on the American Indian for names was emphasized when the chamber of commerce of eastern Connecticut held their summer outing as guests of the Webster-Dudley chamber of commerce and Southbridge board of trade at Lake Chaugog-gugmanahung-gug-gug-gug, a historic spot and former conference ground of the red men who named it. The day was spent in attempting to masticate the name of the lake and a large amount of clam chowder, clams, sea bass and lobster and spring chicken.

That Awful Word!

Even after a woman finally persuades her husband to get a pair of white flannel trousers and look as if he had a little social position she is constantly tortured by the gnawing fear that he will refer to "em as pants" in some select company.—Ohio State Journal.

WOMEN ROOKIES PLAY AT WAR GAME

Women rookies at Lake Geneva awaiting inspection.

The two weeks' encampment of women rookies at Lake Geneva is well on its way, and the girls participating in it are enthusiastic, and it's not all restrained enthusiasm either. They do just the work that our soldiers on the border have to do, but it's not quite so hot at Lake Geneva, and then there's to be an end to it soon.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, Wednesday, Aug. 23, 1876.—One year ago this morning occurred the heavy frost.

A new sidewalk and gutter are being built along North First street, along side Wheeler's block.

Dr. S. S. Judd has sold his matched grey colts to a gentleman who proposes to ship them to San Francisco.

We are indebted to Baker Woodruff of this city for some late copies of the Japan Daily Herald, published at Yokohama.

Arrangements have been made to secure from the art galleries in Chicago 100 paintings for exhibition at the fair. Fifty of them will be very choice specimens. There will also be several pieces of statuary, of beauty and merit.

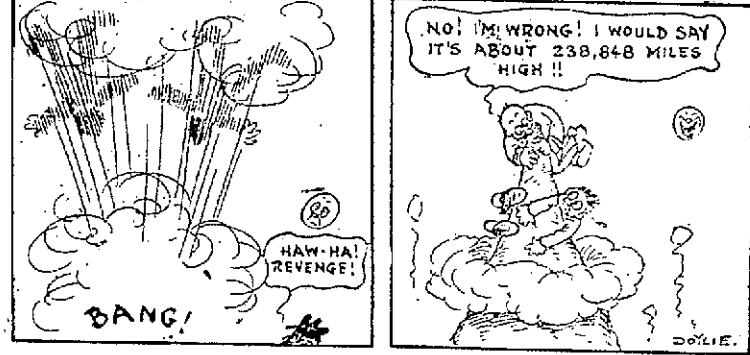

Large crowds are expected from the country to witness the base ball match tomorrow.

The Milwaukee Sentinel of this morning has the following in relation to the forthcoming game.

"Tomorrow morning the West Ends go to special train to Janesville to defeat the champions a second time. The game will be a fine one whatever be the result, and a large crowd of Milwaukeeans will be there to see the sport. The train will leave the St. Paul depot at 9:30 a. m. and return at 11 p. m. Janesville is a handsome place and visitors are handsomely treated, consequently there is an inducement for citizens to help the West Ends by going out on the excursion."

"They will want nine cars on the special train as every man will want a car for himself."

CLOSER NOW.

Is Grammar Essential?

Sometimes it is urged that formal grammar teaches children to write and speak correctly; but as all Americans have studied formal grammar, including newspaper reporters and saleswomen, there would appear to be no guaranty that formal grammar study leads to correct habits of speech. On the other hand, I once knew a school where for 13 years not a minute was spent on formal grammar and, like the woman who does not miss a slice or two, no one ever knew the difference.—Abraham Flexner, in the Atlantic.

YANKS SHOVE SOX DOWN A NOTCH, 7-6

Rowlands Beaten in Uphill Battle With Poor Base Running Bio Feature of Their Trio East.

The New York Yankees beat the White Sox, 7 to 6, yesterday. They pounded Eddie Cicotte and when Lefty Williams was sent in they treated him until the last stages of the game, when they began to show life and for a while threatened to win.

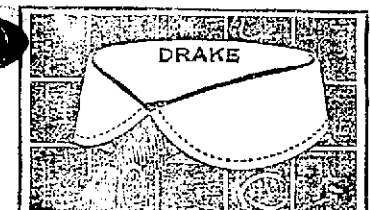

Both teams drew a brace of tallies in the opener and the Yankees got another in the fourth when they broke away again and shoved two across. In the sixth and seventh each team was able to score and the Sox rally in the eighth drew two more. Fournier had hit for two bags, scoring Collins and Jackson, and with but one out, tried to reach third. He was caught at the sack and the game was lost.

A terrific ninth inning rally was stopped by Mullin, who dove and clung to a floor and who made another sensational stop of a short fly.

BRAVES IN CLEAN SWEEP OF THREE WITH CINCINNATI

A pass to "Spudgrass, Wilhoit's single and Magee's out gave Boston one run and the game in the first inning of Tuesday's contest, which was stopped at the end of the fifth inning on account of rain. The score was 0 to 0. It marked a clean sweep of the three-game series for the Braves. Neale got the only Cincinnati hit.

Sport Snap Shots MORRIS MILLER

If reports from Oklahoma are true, Frank Moran has failed to profit by his experience with Dick Dillon. He seems that he is not taking his bout with Carl Morris at Tulsa, Okla., on his own terms. He is said to have his automobile out there and is spending most of his time in the car. Moran's many friends will be sorry to hear this. Carl Morris is far from a good fighter, but he has been boxing often and he is an powerful, and will surely beat Moran if the Pittsburgher enters the ring out of condition, as he did against Dillon. The very fact that Carl Morris is not a great fighter with make it worse for Moran if he loses to the Oklahoma giant. Frank has a lot to gain by beating Morris. It will restore at least some of his prestige, and he can demand a return bout with Dillon. If he loses, he is through as a drawing card. Moran is such a likable and sensible fellow that it is hard to understand why he doesn't realize that his only assets in boxing are his endurance and punch. To retain these he must be in condition. He wasn't in shape for Dillon, took a terrible beating and was jeered unmercifully. Frank Moran's rise to pugilistic prominence was meteoric. His decline gives promise of being even more sudden. It is too bad.

Notices have been sent to 120 candidates to report to Head Coach Tad Jones of Yale on Sept. 5. Never before has a Yale captain called such a large squad for preliminary practice. Jones has the exacting report of the men specified. One of the reasons for Captain Black discarding the roster of the past two seasons and coming to Yale to train instead of going to make a training table might be secured under the scientific management of the university dining hall.

President Comiskey of the White Sox isn't seeking deals that may lead to changes on his team. Commy believes he has corralled a bunch of players who should win a pennant and he probably will demand that his manager produce the goods. The White Sox owner is well satisfied with his players and is reluctant to part with any of his boys who were recently. The New York Yankees are about the worst crippled aggregation in the game. Colonel Rupert and Captain Huston met Bill Donovan in Chicago for a conference and they visited Comiskey. They wanted some players to help their club in its extremity, but the nothing doing sign dangled from Commy's baseball emporium. He had no players for sale or trade.

Those who have watched Hans Wagner playing the National league this season say he is better than any time since 1911. This seems remarkable, in view of the fact that he is rounding out his twentieth year as a big league star. In Philadelphia recently the papers raved over his work, asserting he made plays no other shortstop in Tener's circuit would have got away with that day. He does all the thinking for the Pirate infield. Wagner is now 43 years of age and he must stop soon—wonder when the day of exit is fixed?

Along in 1914 a youngster named Bigbee was proving a sensation with the baseball team of the University of Oregon and a crafty and far-seeing Pittsburgh scout signed him—and then somebody back in Pittsburgh released him without even so much as a trial. The youngster finished school and went out to make his way in baseball. A couple of weeks ago the Pittsburgh club paid $5,000 to Tacoma for his contract. He is the same Carson Bigbee released by Pittsburgh without a looking over in 1914. The scout who have watched his work say he is not a second Ty Cobb but rather he is a second Willie Keeler. He is a little fellow, fast as a flash, who can hit, run and field, and unless the dope is all wrong he should be a star in the game for some time to come.
